

Introduction

In the movie The Kingdom there was a lot of excitement and thrill. It did a good job of showing the atmosphere of the Middle East. I saw that people will resort to violence really quick and aren't afraid to kill. There were also parts in the movie that were depressing. It's extremely sad to see children get killed. Overall I enjoyed watching this movie. I'm glad

Summary

In The Kingdom a team of FBI agents go to Saudi Arabia to investigate and solve a horrible, deadly attack. They try to catch the man in charge of the attack before he tries to kill again. The FBI agents, Jamie Foxx, Chris Cooper, Jennifer Garner, and Jason Bateman all join forces with Saudi Arabia's forces to find this guy. As they search they are confronted with stubborn people who just want to fight and kill them. One of the FBI agents from the US even gets kidnapped and almost killed! In the end of the movie they find their target and kill him but in the process the Saudi officer with them unfortunately gets shot and dies. The battle and investigation is finally over for now but the end leads you to think there is more to come. The team of FBI agents safely returns home to their families with bumps and bruises but thankfully they all made it alive.

A Better Understanding of Middle Eastern Society

The scene that helped me grasp a better understanding of Middle Eastern society was when Jennifer Garner wasn't permitted to go to the dinner with the prince. This was because she was a girl. Their society limits the freedom of females. I don't agree with
